Shaping the Pony.

The formation of breeds of ponies in different parts of the world is one Square. of the most interesting things in connection with horses, for, unlike the diminutive breeds in other kinds of domestic creatures - as bantams. among fowls, or the smaller varieties among dogs-which have been bred down below the normal size by the skill of man, the diminution which has resulted in any of the breeds of really small ponies has been wholly the work of nature. The horse only attained the size that we are accustomed to consider as normal in the temperate zone and if taken to a very cold or very hot country he will inevitably deteriorate in size. He does not deteriorate, however, in other respects; indeed, the pony of whatever type is much more thoroughly a horse, as regards the highest equine qualities and characteristics, than horses like those of the draft breeds, which greatly exceed in size the normal and original type.-Outing Mag-

The other women at the counter looked at her deferentially, and the clerks gazed fascinated. From counter to counter the woman went, without glancing to the right or to the left. She examined every yard of goods, every ready-to-wear garment, every piece of embroidery, lace,

Then, with the swiftness of an arrow, she shot into the basement of the store, and from a damaged egg beater where the woman encountered awestricken glances from the other wo men and the clerks. At last the town clock began striking 6 p. m. Clerks removed their aprons and covers were placed over the goods preparatory to closing the store for the night, and that small, thin woman, with a triumphant gleam in her eyes and a grim smile on her lips, carrying a bundle about as large as a walnut, walked out of the store, and every clerk there and every woman knew they had seen a magnificent "shopper" in full operation.-Atchison Globe.

NATURE TEACHES THE RABBIT

Instinct Alone, Not Their Parents, Tells Them How and What to Eat.

In popular "nature literature" it is often stated that wild animals "go to school;" that the wood mothers teach their young both manners and morals that lead to the saving of their lives by grace of their legs. A writer, however, who has had a pair of rabbits under constant observation, having taken them from their mother when they were but a day old, declares that nature, in the guise of instinct, was the only teacher they had or needed.

The baby rabbits got along excellently. They soon began to crawl wabblingly out of their nest and nibble at oats and to chew up whole blades of tender grass.

Of several things I am positive. They never saw their mother "freeze," nor legs; nor could they have learned from her what is good to eat and what is poisonous.

As soon as they were strong enough to balance themselves, I saw them air. About the same time they were observed busily to wash their faces with their fore paws. Some tried to do it and fell over, unable to balance themselves. No experience was required for them to practice the art of

I tried to feed the rabbits with common vegetable poison. By giving them a very small handful of grass with several sprigs of nightshade intermixed, I was able to note their preferences. This experience was often repeated. In no case did I see them eat any nightshade. Evidently they possessed protective instincts which guarded them without a mother's teaching.-Country Life in America.

Reluctantly the little maid complied, but with a flushed and deeply dissatisfied countenance as the visitor remorse lessly pushed the situation to its limit and refused to be satisfied while a pansy yet adorned the bed or a fragrant leaf of any appreciable size remained on the bush.

A week later the visitor was greeted by a smiling little face and a smiling pansy bed, royal in purple and gold, while the geranium bush sturdily held aloft a thick verdure of odorous leaves. "Are you satisfied, little girl?" 'Oh, yes, I'm giving to everybody now and have plenty."

LAST MINSTREL OF IRELAND

Thomas Smith, Aged Wandering Singer and Story Teller, Died Recently in County Meath.

An aged wandering singer, rhymster and story teller, who was said to be a descendant of one famed in the days of minstrelsy, died recently in the hospital in County Meath, Ireland. He was the last of the old school of so-called poets who lived by story telling and verse making at farm house firesides. His name was Thomas Smith, and according to report one of his ancestors wore cap and bells and served as a jester to a prince. In his boyhood Smith wore a faded doublet of alternating stripes of yellow and blue which had been handed down to him as a relic of his great-granddaddy's fame as a countryside fun-

His stories for the most part had to do with the fairies, and always presented the good fairy in the part of straightened tangles and easing the path of happy marriage. His visits throughout the country were made with scheduled regularity, and an evening with the poet was the occasion for a gathering of young folks. Like most poets, he was not thrifty, and died poor.

What Swatters Face?

A female house fly which has hibernated in a dwelling house, or elsewash her face, nor sit up on her hind where, writes Prof. F. L. Washburn in the Popular Science Monthly, may produce in the spring, at the lowest estimate, 120 eggs. Assuming that one-half of these hatch as females, and allowing that the breeding goes on without check for four months, we have as the descendants of a single hibernating individual 214,557,844,320, 000,000,000,000 files. Now, a house fly measures exactly one-fourth of an inch in length; the distance around the earth at the equator is said to be 24,800 miles. It would take, therefore, 3.688.312,000 files placed end to end to go around the world once. Using this number as a denominator, and the number of flies produced in four months from one mother as a numer ator, we find she will give rise, in the course of a summer, to enough flies to encircle the globe at the equator 5,000 times, and have plenty of progeny to spare!

Awed Abyssinian Delegates.

An amusing mistake was made by two Abyssinian delegates of the Emperor Menelik to France. Awed by the splendor of his gold lace uniform and the solemnity of his imposing manner, they mistook the usher at the door of the foreign minister's office for M. de Selves himself. As they were brought into the ante room the usher was standing with his hand on the door handle ready to announce them. But at the sight of his silver chain, his medals, his sword, his gold topped cane and his three-cornered hat the Abyssinians could not be expected to know they were in the presence of a mere servant. So bowing low repeatedly, they approached him slowly and with great respect until they were in reach of his coattails, which, one on either side, they seized in their hands and kissed. The usher did not know what to do, but the appearance of the minister relieved the situation,

Gloves and Kings.

Gloves have always been connected with royalty. When the tomb of King John was opened a century ago it was discovered that his hands were gloved. In France the gloves worn by the king at the coronation were consecrated by the officiating bishop, and at the recent English coronation a glove was thrown down as a challenge to any one to dispute the royal

When George II. was crowned an unknown Jacobite came forward and lifted the glove on behalf of the absent Stuart, and at the coronation of Edward VII. the duke of Norfolk handed to his majesty a pair embroidered with the ducal arms because a manor nnected with the duke's inheritance is held by the service of presenting the monarch with a right hand glove on the day of the recognition

DOLLAR AN ANCIENT WORD

Heard in the Language at Least 300 Years Before It Was Used in America.

The word "dollar" was in our language at least 300 years ago, for it is used by Shakespeare several times, says Harper's Weekly. It is supposed that the word was in use in London in the latter part of the sixteenth century, having been brought in by the North German merchants, who managed the trade on the Baltic and in Russia.

"Dollar" appeared first in an English dictionary in 1745. It is a borrowed word, being the German "thaler." The coins issued by the mint in Joachimsthal were called "Joachimthalers." When other mints were established, the "Joachims" was dropped and the coins were called simply "thal-

The dollar was adopted by congress as the unit of our currency on August 5, 1785. It was to contain 375.64 grains of pure silver; but when the mint was established, in 1792, the re-quirement was reduced to 271.25 grains of pure silver. The coinage of dollars began in 1794.

MODEST GEORGE MOORE.

"I wonder," says the author of 'Esther Waters" complacently in "The Apostle," just published in Dublin, "if Paul has ever been seen by any man as clearly as he has been seen by me." He paints a fancy portrial implement the world sees fit to trait of the apostle and this is part of his picture:

"A man of medium height, about five feet eight or nine, a round head covered with dark curly hair, a short neck, square shoulders, a long body, thick legs, with some belly under his girdle. His large luminous eyes often look into mine, and sometimes he appears with his shirt open." The description is vivid in detail, but not, we think, in good taste; and was not St. Paul short sighted? -From the Athenaeum.

Union labor lost the control of the city administration at San Francisco. Although the full returns of the primary are not in, there is enough to assure the defeat of the candidates backed by organizations of labor. James Rolph, Jr., was elected mayor by 18,000, on a fusion of Democrats and Republicans.

How the Pretty Girl Kept Her Word When Threatened With a Kiss.

With impudent daring the dashing young man, having carried on a merry onversation until the timid creature had not noticed how far they were craying from the house, turned to er and said:

"I believe I will hiss you." "Sir!" she exclaimed haughtily, rawing herself up with an air of real disdain, "How dare you?"

"It isn't a question of courage; it's question of taste," he smiled nonchalantly.

"I positively forbid you to do such thing!" she declared.

"And what good does your forbidling do?" he argued. "We are fully a nile from any one. We are away out here in the meadows. Listen to the joyous trilling of yonder birds that are billing and cooing. All nature suggests love-making, and-"

"Sir, you are positively rude!" she interrupted, stamping her little foot. "I should be rude, indeed, not to wish to kiss so pretty a girl in such lovely surroundings," he said placing his arm firmly about her slender waist.

"I will not let you kiss me!" she asserted.

"You will not?" he laughed easily. 'How will you prevent me? I am stronger than you; you cannot get away from me.' "I can still scream, thank heaven!"

she answered determinedly. With no further argument he placed his free hand under her dimpled chin, elevated it to the proper angle and kissed her. True to her word, she exclaimed, Thank heaven!"-Judge.

KNOTS INSTEAD OF BUTTONS

Chinese Diplomat's Explanation of the Various Kinds Used by His Countrymen.

A Chinese diplomat, dressed in brocaded silk, was sitting out a dance beside a fountain with a Bar Harbor

"Yes," he admitted, "my dress is pretty, and one queer thing about it is that it has no buttons-only knots and knotholes."

He showed her the fastenings of his flame colored jacket.

"You see?" he said. "Short cords, each with a knot at the end, and on the other side a knothole, or, as you would say, a buttonhole. That is simpler than buttons, simpler and easier. Do you wear pajamas? Yes? Then you must know that what I say is so." "On my pajamas," said the girl, laughing a little, "I have buttons and buttonholes instead of knots and knotholes."

"How foolish of you!" said the diplomat. "But what I was going to say was that the knots we employ in place of buttons are of many kinds, and they have many names. There are plum blossom and cherry blossom knots for young girls' garments. Such you would wear. There are winter and snow knots for the aged. Soldiers have death knots."

"What kind of knots are yours?" the young girl asked.

"Mine?" he replied. "Oh, mine are just the usual married man's knots." "And what are they called?" she

"Knots of resignation," he answered,

Gangrene and Oxygen.

A remarkable instance of the advantage which medical men may derive from chemistry has been published in the reports of the Hospital Hotel Dieu, at Paris. A young student wrote a thesis in which he showed that gangrene and deficiency of oxygen were to be regarded as cause and effect. Dr. Laugier, surgeon-in-chief of the hospital, having a case of spontaneous gangrene under his care, proceeded to test the theory. The patient, a man seventy-five years of age, had the disease in one footone toe was mortified, and the whole member was in danger. The diseased part was enclosed in an apparatus contrived to disengage oxygen continuously, and in a short time the gangrene was arrested and the foot recovered its healthy condition. A singular experiment tried upon another patient, equally aged, and equally successful, from which the inference follows that treatment with oxygen is an effectual remedy for a disease which too often infests hospitals.

They May Give Away Their Money, but Never Themselves, Says G. K. Chesterton.

There are two other odd and rather important things to be said about them. The first is this: That with this aristocracy we do not have the chance of a lucky variety in types which belongs to larger and looser aristocracies. The moderately rich include all kinds of people-even good people. Even priests are sometimes saints; and even soldiers are sometimes heroes. Some doctors have really grown wealthy by curing their patients and not by flattering them: some brewers have been known to sell beer. But among the very rich you will never find a really generous man, even by accident. They may give their money away, but they will never give themselves away; they are egotistic, secretive, dry as old bones. To be smart enough to get all that money, you must be dull enough to Lastly, the most serious point about them is this: That the new miser is flattered for his meanness and the old one never was. It was never called self-denial in the old miser that he lived on beans. It is called selfdenial in the new millionaire if he lives on beans. A man like Dancer was never praised as a Christian saint for going in rags. A man like Rockefeller is praised as a sort of pagan stoic for his early rising or his unassuming dress. His "simple" meals, his "simple" clothes, his "simple" funeral, are all extolled as if they were creditable to him. They are disgraceful to him, exactly as disgraceful as the tatters and vermin of the old miser were disgraceful to him. To be in rags for charity would be the condition of a saint; to be in rags. for money was that of a filthy old fool. Precisely in the same way, to be "simple" for charity is the state of a saint; to be "simple" for money is that of a filthy old fool. Of the two I have more respect for the old miser, gnawing bones in an attic.—G. K. Chesterton in London Daily News.

FRENCH LOVE OF DRAMATIC

A French soldier sat on the summit of a hill overlooking a garrison town; his horse was picketed close by; the man was smoking leisurely, and from time to time he glanced from the esplanade to a big official envelope be held in his hand.

modern war is, that it is associated throughout, in all particulars, with a vast and most irregular formation of commercial enterprise. There is no incentive to Mammon-worship so remarkable as that which it affords. The political economy of war is now one of its most commanding aspects. Even apart from the fact that war suspends, ipso facto, every rule of public thrift, and tends to sap honesty itself in the use of the public treasury for which it makes such unbounded calls, it therefore is the greatest feeder of that lust of gold which we are told is the essence of commerce, though we had hoped it was only its occasional besetting sin. -W. E. Gladstone. Heaven and earth shall pass away, but that which thinks within me must think for ever; that which feels must feel; I am, and I can never cease to be.—James Montgomery.

Landor Poems Found. The Walter Savage Landor exhibition at the London library is of great scripts and first editions from the important Landor collection of S. Wheeler, says the London Times.

The most interesting of the literary himself described on a slip of paper (here preserved) as "sweepings from under the study table." The papers in this volume were taken from Landor's writing desk more than thirty years after his death. Some of the poems are unpublished, and in other cases there are to be found the original drafts of lines which appeared in print in an altered form. Other documents include a will written by himself in which he be-queathed pictures to Robert Browning and Mrs. Lynn Linton.

ARE FRIENDS OF THE FARMER!

The Kentuckian has made a special Blackbirds and Other Feathered Creatures Feed on Insects That Destroy Crops.

> A number of years ago blackbirds were exceedingly abundant through tiful that the farmers believed they were damaging crops, so they began poisoning the birds. A single grain of corn soaked in strychnine was enough to kill a blackbird. In the years that followed, great numbers of these and other birds were destroyed during the spring and fall. At the same time thousands of quail, prairie chickens and other game birds were killed in every county to supply the market. As the birds began to disappear, swarms of locusts took their place. These insects hatched out in countless numbers and began devastating crops. Few fields of grain escaped damage Many were entirely destroyed. Where blackbirds, quail, prairie chickens, plover, and other birds remained, they took to living entirely on locusts. In such localities fair crops were secured solely through the assistance of

The members of the United States entomological commission who witnessed the work accomplished by the birds in this region, said the results were so complete that it was impossible to entertain any doubt as to the value of birds as locust destroyers .-William L. Finley, in Success.

Veterinary Physician & Surgeon | WAS INVENTOR OF VOLAPUK

Johann Martin Schleyer, German Pastor, Devised That System of Universal Speech.

The name of Johann Martin Schleyer, who has just died at Constance at the age of 80, is now known to but a few persons outside the number directly concerned in his work. This German pastor was the inventor of Volapuk, which was once put forward with some plausible chances of success as an international language.

Schleyer's system of universal speech was introduced to the world in 1879. It was formed on the basis of similar artificial languages which seek to exclude all elements not universal. The sounds in Volapuk are expressed by twenty-seven letters, which, generally speaking, are to be used in their Latin, Italian or German values. Words are formed from the European languages. The noun in Volapuk is the root of the word divested of all sounds excluded by the rules of the new tongue. In its final effect this artificial speech was rather a meager medium of expression, practically incapable of any special vocabulary. So changed by its processes and rules were the roots of the words taken from various tongues that they were scarcely recognizable and had to be learned by memory.

These disadvantages of the invention did not, however, prevent it from finding supporters in Europe and this

Was a Whisky Jack.

Three brokers walking up William street were attracted by four stuffed birds in a dingy window, says the New York Sun. One bet the two others that neither could name all four.

The other man knew the ringnecked pheasant at sight, and one of the other fowls after inspection, and made a lucky guess on a third. The fourth bird stumped him. It was about robin size with a long tail, quaker gray, fluffy, and had a white throat and a white forehead.

"Er-er-catbird," he ventured.

"Come again." "Butcher bird. No? Well, brown thrasher just back from Pittsburg. You win. What is the bird, anyway?' "Whisky Jack," said the wise one. The other regarded him admiringly.

"That's good enough," he said. "I'll buy on that anyhow. I thought you didn't know him yourself."

But a whisky jack the bird was. His other name is Canada jay, and he haunts the camps of hunters in the northern forests. Whisky Jack is merely the guides' corruption of the Indian name.

Mutton a Muscle Builder.

Dr. D. W. Burbank, graduate manager of the Stanford university student body, in researches for more nutritious proteids upon which to feed the varsity football squad, has discovered that mutton contains a large portion of muscle-bearing properties. He has purchased 15 sheep and is fattening them.

"The student body will erect a slaughter house," declares Burbank, "where sheep will be butchered and supplied to the training table. This year the feeding of the varsity squad on well-fattened matured mutton will be conducted as an experiment, and if the Cardinals can beat the University of California team this fall we will make mutton the main article of diet hereafter."

has written a new novel for Lippincott's Magazine which bids fair to overtop the reputation of her first great work, "The Quick or the Dead." As in her first story, the scene is laid in Virginia, her beloved Southland. The plot is one of the most remarkable and absorbing that has ever appeared between covers. Don't wait to get the October number of Lippincott's in which Amélie Rives' great story appears. The number containing "The Quick or the Dead" was sold out in a flash. There will be an even bigger demand for her new story.

Three good numbers—October (containing the new Amélie Rives' story) and the November and December issues with each yearly subscription to begin with the January, 1912 number. Send $2.50 to-day and get fifteen numbers for the price of twelve.

THE STORE FOR MEN. IRVING ROSEBOROUGH CO.

DODGING THE PRYING PRESS

How the President and Cabinet Fool the Newspaper Correspondents in Washington.

When the cabinet holds a meeting one of the things that causes invariable concern is, "What shall we tell the correspondents?"

The president has made it well understood that the less said about these conferences the better; but there is always a group of newspaper men at the door of the White House offices waiting for members of the cabinet to appear after their session It has come to be something of a joke with the men who help the president decide great questions of public policy that when the usual question is meetings the chief executive turns to the secretary of agriculture and says:

"Supose you see the newspaper men, Wilson; we didn't discuss any thing in your department."

It is a point of honor, a sort of unwritten law, that no member of the cabinet shall give out information regarding affairs in other departments of the government than his own. While, therefore, the venerable secretary of agriculture presents himself as a target for the newspaper men's questions, the other members of the cabinet quietly and unostentatiously slip away, and the world learns that "nothing of importance was discussed" that day by the president and his cabinet .- The Sunday

HAS THEORY OF STONEHENGE

Professor Norton of Harvard Believes It Connected With Similar Erec-

Prof. Richard Norton of Harvard is credited with the theory that the cyclopean structures at Stonehenge are connected with similar erections that are found in northern Africa. Professor Norton has just returned after a period of research in the Greek city of Cyrene in Africa, and his theory of Stonehenge is partly the result of his work. Stonehenge is ordinarily supposed to be the work of the Druids, and it may be said that the Druids in British archaeology have always occupied the place sacred to the cat in domestic matters. Whatever was inexplicable upon any other theory would always yield to the Druidic hypothesis. The Druids, in fact, were a sort of lesser Providence whose powers it was impious to doubt. If one asked how the gigantic rocking stones of Cornwall were balanced upon a point all perplexities were banished by a reference to the Druids, while the feat of erecting Stonehenge and bringing those mighty monoliths from a distance, a feat well-nigh impossible to modern engineering, was explained in a moment and to the meanest intelligence by a simple reference to the Druids.

A Rossini Joke.

One of Rossini's jokes. Rossini promised a place in the opera orchestra to a trombonist, and then forgot it, says the Musical Courier. At one of his dinner parties the butter announced THE the visit of this same protege. Rossini hastened to welcome him, and relieving him of his instrument disappeared a few minutes to return with his friends. Handing the instrument to the trombonist with a request to let the company hear him, Rossini prepared to listen. Trombone to lips the musician blows-dismay-no sound; cheeks bulging, eyes distended. In vain the unhappy man makes superhuman efforts to produce harmonious sounds. At last! O effort supreme! With a sound like a hoarse goose cackle there shoots from the trombone a mass of sticky macaroni. "No harm, my friend," said Rossini, "you have proved yourself a strong musician." And the next day the coveted position was offered to the trom-

Officials of Employes' Organization Say the Strike Signal Will be Immediate.

Chicago, Sept. 29.-A strike on all the Harriman lines, involving more than 35,000 shopmen is inevitable, according to the five presidents of the international unions to which most of the men belong. The calling of the strike waits only upon the word from the officials, who have not yet agreed upon the hour. According to these same officials the contemplated struggle will, to a great extent, determine the future attitude of all railroads in their dealings with employes.

The shopmen will strike, they say, not because of any dissensions as to wages or conditions of labor, but to establish the newly organized federation of shop employes as a means of negotiating disputes between emmanagement into chaos.

The dispute reached a climax yes terday when Julius Kruttschnitt, vice president of the Harriman lines, reiterated the determination of the roads not to meet with the federa-
